	A technical staff could be determined in the installation.  Numerous soldiers with soiled coveralls were always observed.
	No heavy weapons or special equipment were seen.
6.	Another troop quarters with stables occupied by about 500 troops with 70 to 80 vehicles and about 200 horses was located west of the barracks installation mentioned in paragraph 5, on the southwest side of the road to Haynau.
7.	signal troops were quartered in the parracks installation on the north edge of Lieghitz, on the east side of the road to Lueben (0 52/B 84). Soldiers with black epaulets and signal insignia were seen near the installation.
8.	About 1,000 troops with black epaulets and tank insignia were seen in another barracks installation, the location of which could not be determined. Contingents of this unit were employed in the military tank repair shop of the post. They were observed marching to and from this shop.
9.	The barracks installation at the airfield was occupied by Soviet air force troops. Polish soldiers of an unknown branch of service were seen in one of the barracks buildings there.
10.	A large military tank repair shop was located in the former Teichert Factory where, according to German workers, tank engines were repaired and overhauled. The engines arrived by rail or truck, many of them from the Neuhammer (0 52/B 34) troop training grounds, the installations of which had been reconstructed, according to German workers. Since mid-1950, no personnel other than Soviet soldiers were employed in the repair shop.
11.	A passenger car repair shop was located in the former Opel repair shop on former Jauerstrasse. It was headed by Captain Zubek, (fnu), a technical officer who wore army uniform with green epaulets and a cap with green service color. The repair shop was repeatedly inspected by General Zhizkin, (fnu), On an average, 40 to 50 German and US-type sedans of the high command were being overhauled, whereas the trucks of the high command were shipped to Berlin for overhauling. Individual Soviet-built ZIS trucks were seen in the streets, not in

12. Prior to late 1949, a Lieutenant General Kutov, (fnu), had his office in a building with a prison, which probably was the former Police court, where criminal cases were being tried. ***

* Comment. General Slavin, (fnu), is reported for the first time to have succeeded Marshall Rokosovski. General Zhiskin, (fnu), is probably Major General of Technical Troops. A.D.Shishkin who was awarded a decoration in April 1945. According to information a General Ostrovski, (fnu), was on the staff of Rokosovski in Liegnitz in the summer of 1949 and frequently went to Stolp for inspection during the preceding time. Lieutenant General Kutov, (fnu), who was frequently mentioned as officer on Marshall Rokosovski's staff by Soviet and Polish emigrant newspapers, the last pertinent report having been of March 1949.

comment. It is known from previous information by other resettlers that the installations mentioned in the present report, excepting the passenger car repair shop in the former Opel repair shop, are occupied by the Soviets. However, it has not been definitely determined whether the troops in the installations are supply troops exclusively, as is stated in the present report, or whether some of them are GHQ units of the Northern Group of Forces.
